
Downsizing deals - Talks continue to save Anglesey Aluminium jobs

Wednesday, 12 Aug, 2009

It is reported that a third round of talks took place between Mr David Bloor director of Anglesey Aluminium and government officials as efforts continue to thrash out a deal to save 350 jobs.

The discussions are believed to be centered on a counter proposal made by the company in response to a EUR 48 million rescue package offered by the government.

Mr Albert Owen Labour MP of Anglesey said that “The next few weeks will be crucial as the company representatives make a business case and they are developing that case now through experts. Obviously the government has to safeguard the taxpayers’ money and the company wants to maintain good trading conditions.

For more news visit at www.steelguru.com