
USD 800 million Lamar Towers project taking shape in Jeddah

Friday, 20 Nov, 2009

Arab News reported that Jeddah's skyline along the Corniche will have a new dimension with Lamar Towers described as the Kingdom's first integrated skyscraper project beginning to take shape.

Mr Ahmed Al Hatti chairman of Cayan for Investment and Development said that "After completing the foundation works, the Lamar Towers project today enters a new phase."

Mr Al Hatti said that the project consists of 2 towers, one of them consisting of 72 stories and the second one of 69 stories. With an investment of SAR 3 billion, it is considered one of the most important investment projects in Saudi Arabia."

He said that the most important phase of the project, of casting the concrete mat of the highest tower was concluded successfully after having overcome drying of the site, where the depth of drilling was about nine meters.

Mr Ahmed Al Hatti said that the project would witness the concrete mat casting work of the second tower immediately after Eid Al Adha as per the plan.

The construction team of project comprises a number of companies with vast and specialized expertise, such as Arabtec Alsaad as the main contractor, Turner Company as the project manager, Saudi Diyar as the engineering supervisor and Cayan International Company as the main developer.
