
Acesita may acquire Metalcorte service center

Sunday, 17 Jun, 2007

It is reported that ArcelorMittal's Acesita Brazil may acquire another service center in order to expand its distribution arm Acesita Serviços. As per report, Acesita would be interested in acquiring Metalcorte's plant of Caxias do Sul at the southern state of Rio Grande do Sul in Brazil.

Metalcorte officials have admitted being in talks with Acesita but gave no further details.

Acesita Serviços Campinas supports the strategy of Acesita to supply its customers with solutions in stainless steel, a combination of products, finishing and logistics. It is fitted with state of the art equipment and provides slitting and cut to length services for flat stainless steel products with various types of surface finishing.

For more news visit at www.steelguru.com