
Kagara to halt ore processing next week

Thursday, 26 Feb, 2009

Reuters reported that Australia's Kagara Limited is to suspend ore processing at two of its mines in Queensland State between March 2-6 due to last week's heavy rains.

The company said in a statement that "The impact of this stoppage on production is yet to be fully quantified but all processing plants have the ability to process ore at a much higher rate than budgeted and a significant proportion of this delayed production is expected to be recouped," the statement said.
