
Wuhu port joins hands with Huainan Mining Industry Group

Friday, 19 Jun, 2009

According to the bulletin of China's Wuhu port, the largest transferring port of energy resource in Anhui province, Wuhu port is planning to build a large-scale coal reserve base with the cooperation of Huainan Mining Industry Group which is the largest coal group in Anhui province likewise.

Sources said that during the construction of the project, Wuhu port will be responsible for providing the space, relevant equipments for coal import and export and also for expanding and rebuilding certain equipments while Huainan Mining Industry Group is to establish the equipments for store up mix and other relevant facilities.

With the first phase investment of CNY 670 million, the coal reserve base is targeted to be built into the largest coal base of its kind along rivers. Also as the most powerful harbor with comprehensive capabilities along the Yangtze artery; Wuhu port will be having a store-up capacity of 5 million tonnes and delivering capacity of 50 million tonnes in the first phase construction. In the second phase, there will be 3 million tonne more store-up capacity added to it and 30 million tonnes more delivering capacity also.

Wuhu Port said "We aim to strengthen and expand our partnerships with Huainan Mining Industry Group and push high our coal delivery volume steadily."

(Sourced from MySteel.net)

Visit www.Mysteel.net for real time access to China steel news!

For more news visit at www.steelguru.com